Pfizer Papers revealed in Brussels: thousands of previously unpublished documents on the Covid vaccine

These are hundreds of thousands of documents, obtained through legal proceedings, that the pharmaceutical company has not published on the adverse effects of mRNA vaccines.

On September 3, MEP Christine Anderson introduced journalist and consultant Naomi Wolf to the European Parliament. Ms. Wolf presented "The Pfizer Papers," a report prepared with Amy Kelly based on hundreds of thousands of documents—which the pharmaceutical company has not published—on the adverse effects of mRNA vaccines.

These documents, obtained through legal proceedings, were analyzed by a team of approximately 3,500 professionals, including doctors and lawyers, who have produced more than 100 reports to date. Ms. Wolf described the data found and, expressing surprise at the experiments revealed, raised the possibility that the European Parliament might investigate the merits of using the vaccine as "a biological weapon deployed to reduce Western populations and exert political influence."

It also called for an investigation into a parallel agreement between BioNTech and a Chinese pharmaceutical company, with which it committed to promoting the development of the same Covid-19 vaccine program as Pfizer.

“This messenger RNA (mRNA) vaccination campaign has gone down in history as the greatest medical scandal of all time. It is the greatest crime against humanity […] In the first seven months of mRNA vaccination, there were 20 times more serious adverse events and 23 times more deaths than all other vaccines combined since their introduction in the 1970s, over a period of 30 years,” said Ms. Anderson.

In 2022, a successful lawsuit by attorney Aaron Siri led to the forced disclosure of approximately 450,000 Pfizer documents held by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). The documents cited by the publisher were subsequently requested under a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) procedure under the Biden administration.

The Pfizer Papers have "reports that link directly to the original documents. If you have any doubts about any of the conclusions, you can consult the Pfizer documents and review the original document yourself," Wolf said.

"First of all, and I think this is very important for you, MEPs: Pfizer knew, one month after the start of the public vaccination campaign – that is, in November 2020 – that this vaccine was ineffective in stopping Covid."

> “I want you to digest this: it means that everything that followed—the bonds, the job losses, the businesses that had to close, the children who couldn’t return to school or university because they weren’t vaccinated, the armed forces forced to get vaccinated, the pilots forced to be vaccinated—it was all based on a lie.”

Naomi Wolf explained that Pfizer claimed that the vaccine material remained at the injection site in the body, but "graphs were found showing that the materials—the spike protein, mRNA, lipid nanoparticles (a petrochemical byproduct: polyethylene glycol, a petroleum derivative, which surrounds the lipid nanoparticles), and industrial fats in the vaccine—did not remain in the deltoid muscle: they biodistributed throughout the body over the next 48 hours and 'moved from the injection site to major organs in the body.'"

"They crossed the blood-brain barrier," she added, citing the documents.

Official information regarding mRNA vaccines states that after vaccination, the mRNA enters muscle cells. Once inside, they use cellular machinery to produce a harmless fragment of the spike protein. This protein is found on the surface of the virus that causes Covid-19. Once the protein is produced, our cells break it down and eliminate it, leaving it in the body as waste. Our cells then display the spike protein fragment on their surface. Our immune system recognizes that the protein doesn't belong. This prompts it to produce antibodies and activate other immune cells to fight what it sees as an infection. Here's what your body might do if you contract Covid-19.

Regulatory documents acknowledge that nanoparticles biodistribute throughout the body within the first 24 to 48 hours, primarily to the lymph nodes and liver.

Pfizer documents revealed that nanoparticles accumulated in the liver, adrenal glands, spleen, lymphatic system, and ovaries. Surgery on the vaccinated women revealed "completely blocked ovaries, in addition to other lesions," Wolf said.

"Pfizer had to hire 2,400 full-time employees to process the serious adverse event reports it was already receiving. In its reports, from November 2020 to February 2021, Pfizer accumulated more than 42,000 serious adverse events."

Myalgia, inflammation, myocarditis and abortions

Ms. Wolf describes how the number one side effect mentioned in Pfizer's articles was myalgia, which it defined as muscle pain. "How many people do you know who feel bad? Pfizer knew they would feel bad. Doctors were puzzled."

The second effect was joint pain. “What is arthritis? What is joint pain? Tendon pain. It's inflammation. How many people do you know who are limping now or who have had knee, hip, or shoulder surgery? Many of them are young and healthy.”

“The third most common effect, as I mentioned, is Covid. But there is also a catastrophic record of horrific side effects on an industrial scale.”

Among these side effects, she details "significant heart damage - myocarditis, pericarditis - problems with the aorta and a large number of blood disorders: thrombosis, thrombocytopenia and blood clots in the lungs and legs."

Ms. Wolf said, "These lipid nanoparticles cause clotting in the body. Those working with lipid nanoparticles already knew this before mRNA."

“Our experts have discovered that lipid nanoparticles destroy the myelin sheath of nerves, which allows the conduction of electricity during an impulse […]. So, of course, there are tremors. How many people do you know who currently suffer from tremors? We are seeing cases of Guillain-Barré syndrome, dementia, seizures, severe neurological disorders, as well as all sorts of autoimmune diseases, such as lupus, because we now know that these injections damage the immune system.”

The documents stated that Pfizer learned in April 2021 that the vaccine had caused harm to children, including myocarditis and pericarditis, as well as heart damage. "We had never seen young people collapse on such a massive scale. Pfizer knew that 35 children had suffered heart damage."

“One of the most shocking aspects our work has brought to light is that the FDA knew, the CDC (Center for Disease Control) knew, and the Israeli Ministry of Health tried to warn the CDC and the Biden administration that the miners were suffering from heart damage.”

“We filed a FOIA request for Biden administration documents mentioning myocarditis and found active conversations, including with up to 15 White House staff members,” she continued.

Instead of saying, 'We need to go back, we need to inform parents in the United States and, by extension, around the world, to protect their children and young people from this risk, they decided to cover it up,' Wolf said.

"Two of our reports, in my opinion, establish a causal link. Half of the serious adverse events, affecting the liver and strokes, occurred within 48 hours of the injection, including deaths. Pfizer knew this," she added.

Regarding reproductive harm and abortions, she cited "1,200 deaths in three months," stating that "these were not statistically random deaths of elderly people with multiple comorbidities: these were 1,200 deaths that doctors reported to Pfizer or the authorities because there was a causality that concerned them."

'Surprising' research on human reproduction

Naomi Wolf said it was odd that they didn't find any significant research on pulmonary effects, which they expected Pfizer to investigate given that it's supposedly a respiratory illness, but they did find some on reproduction.

“All these side effects and dangers aren't the most surprising thing about the Pfizer documents. What is surprising is that if Covid is a respiratory infection, you would expect to find a lot of information about the lungs, oxygen levels, and mucous membranes in these documents. There's almost no mention of respiratory problems.”

The research included damage to sperm, fallopian tubes, and eggs, damage to the placenta, damage to fetuses in utero , damage during childbirth, and damage to breastfeeding. She called it an "obsessive, 360-degree approach to destroying human reproduction."

“That's what they were studying. Why? Why did they take male and female rats, vaccinate the males, breed them with unvaccinated females, sacrifice the animals, and examine the cells in their sex organs for respiratory infection?”

The released documents revealed that they were aware of the vaccine's reproductive effects. According to Ms. Wolf, "They knew that lipid nanoparticles, designed to cross all membranes in the body—the placenta is a membrane—were crossing the placentas of women who had been advised, in my country, to be vaccinated during pregnancy, thus contravening decades of knowledge about protecting babies in utero . Normally, nothing is given to a pregnant woman unless absolutely necessary. Yet they were advised to be vaccinated."

"They cross the placenta and cause calcifications, which prevents the baby from receiving nutrients and oxygen. In my country, midwives have independently informed me that babies are born prematurely because the placenta does not develop normally; they send me photos of flat, abnormal placentas, with insufficient blood and oxygen supply, and that is why babies have to be born prematurely."

"It's not easy to give birth to a mother with a damaged placenta: the placenta collapses during delivery, leading to hemorrhages during labor or retention of part of the placenta, which is extremely dangerous. Thus, maternal and fetal mortality among women who have resolved this problem in the West has increased by 40% since the injections. Pfizer knew this."

She also mentions that Pfizer knew the nanoparticles would cross the membrane surrounding the testicles of male babies in utero and degrade the Leydig and Sertoli cells of boys born to vaccinated mothers. “Even if babies aren’t vaccinated, they still get it from their mothers. What’s the effect? Leydig and Sertoli cells are the male hormone factories: they activate male hormones in adolescence, triggering typical male body development: a deep voice, broad shoulders, body and facial hair, and, in adulthood, the ability to procreate.”

"We don't know if these male children exposed in utero will grow up to be normal, fertile adults, even if they are never vaccinated with mRNA. Pfizer knew they were damaging the testes of males in utero ."

Ms. Wolf cited an andrology report that "confirmed the decreased sperm count and motility in vaccinated men. This is something you should look into. I believe Pfizer has knowledge about the dangers that sperm from vaccinated men pose to women, but is not disclosing it."

Pfizer documents warn male study subjects not to have sex with unvaccinated women of childbearing age; and, if they do, to use two reliable forms of birth control. Pfizer defines exposure as including "skin contact, inhalation, and bodily fluids such as semen."

"To this day, we don't know exactly what this means. We know that women have reportedly experienced terrible cramps and problems during sex with vaccinated husbands. We don't know why Pfizer advised them against it."

Experiments on babies?

In one study cited in the report, vaccinated women were advised not to become pregnant. Wolf explains that 270 women still became pregnant, and that "the records of 234 of these pregnancies were lost," despite "Pfizer's obligation to follow up."

> "Of the 36 women who gave birth, more than 80% lost their babies."

According to the study, it cites that "one of the most troubling sections" of Pfizer's documents is titled "pregnancy and breastfeeding report."

"It makes me sad and gives me a heavy feeling to talk about it, because it is very dark news."

Regarding the document, she explains that it consists of eight pages prepared specifically for the White House and delivered in April 2021.

"The report includes a graph showing menstrual damage in tens of thousands of women: 15,000 women with daily bleeding after vaccination; 10,000 women with two periods per month; 7,500 women with no periods at all."

She also mentions "10-year-old girls bleeding after being injected; 85-year-old women bleeding after being injected; women bleeding, passing clots – ruined lives and, certainly, ruined fertility."

There's a graph showing that they conducted experiments on babies, and they knew it; they conducted experiments on at least three babies who died. It showed that babies breastfed by vaccinated mothers suffered from vomiting, edema (tissue swelling), fever, poor weight gain, and were inconsolable. I can't get that out of my head. One baby had seizures after being breastfed by his vaccinated mother and was taken to the emergency room where he died of multiple organ failure: his system completely shut down.

Naomie Wolf lamented that "to this day, women in Europe don't know this; neither do most women in the United States."

Ms. Wolf further claims that it was known in 2017 that lipid nanoparticles could be harmful to human fertility, but they were still used.

She was likely referring to the study conducted by Rahim Dad Brohi of the Key Laboratory of Genetics, Breeding and Reproduction of the Ministry of Education of China, College of Animal Science and Technology, Huazhong Agricultural University, Wuhan, China.

"Despite the benefits of nanoparticles, several nanotechnology applications have exposed humans and animals to their potential toxicities. Regarding human exposure to nanoparticles (NPs), they can enter the body through inhalation, ingestion, skin absorption, injection, or implantation," the study states.

“Therefore, the widespread use of nanomaterials has raised concerns about the negative impact of NPs on human health, primarily on the male and female reproductive systems and fetal health, particularly given the small size of NPs, their ease of penetration and biocompatibility, and their potential ability to cross the placental barrier.”

The editor-in-chief told MPs that her investigation began after reporting accounts describing menstrual disturbances after mRNA injections. She was banned overnight from Twitter, Facebook, and YouTube. “My bio changed simultaneously around the world, which is curious. I didn’t think AI was so widespread at the time, but something changed it: I went from ‘Rhodes Scholar, Oxford PhD’ to ‘conspiracy theorist’.”

Links with China

Ms Wolf called on MEPs to investigate whether the vaccine's development was "a biological weapon deployed to reduce Western populations and exert political influence."

She notes that she found an SEC document linking BioNTech, with which Pfizer produced the mRNA vaccine—"which we were told was a German company, but it's not entirely German"—with Fosun Pharma, one of China's largest labs.

For Ms. Wolf, this alliance was worrying.

According to her, the vaccine rollout in the West is not random and the side effects observed in the documents "were not randomly distributed."

“As a political consultant, I was struck by the fact that the largest number of serious adverse events is concentrated in the most influential Western democracies: more than 42,000 in the United States, followed by a significant number in demographically and politically important European countries: Germany, France, the United Kingdom, Italy, Spain, and Greece, in that order. The remaining 52 countries in the rest of the world account for only about 7,000 adverse events.”

“I will conclude by emphasizing that if you consider those who were required to be vaccinated—this is true in my country and, I think, in much of Western Europe—it was our soldiers, marines, air force, special forces operatives, the new generation of pilots, our students wanting to return to class. It is interesting to note that the major Ivy League universities required the vaccine. Who else was required to be vaccinated? Our health care workers: doctors, nurses, and first responders.”

"Fosan Pharmaceuticals, a subsidiary of Fosan International, one of China's largest companies, has rejected Biden's proposed vaccine three times. This is telling," Wolf said. Fosan is the company associated with BioNTech.

BioNTech's vaccine developed in China

BioNTech was founded in 2008 and is registered in Germany. Dr. Ugur Sahin is CEO of the immunotherapy treatment. In 2018, the Pfizer-BioNTech collaboration was launched in the form of a bilateral agreement for the development of mRNA influenza vaccines.

BioNTech was listed on the NASDAQ in the United States in October 2019, according to the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).

On March 15, 2020, Shanghai Fosun Pharmaceutical Industrial Development Co., Ltd. announced that it has obtained an exclusive license from BioNTech to exclusively develop and commercialize the Covid-19 vaccine, developed based on BioNTech's mRNA technology platform, in China.

Under the agreement, Fosun would pay BioNTech licensing fees (including upfront payment, clinical development, registration and sales milestone payments) in the aggregate amount not to exceed US$385 million, and would pay sales royalties at a rate of 35% of annual gross profit during the term of such royalties.

The document states that as of the date of the announcement, the Cooperation's prophylactic vaccine is undergoing preclinical studies in Germany. Clinical studies and related work in the Territory (i.e., the Mainland China Special Administrative Region, Hong Kong and Macao, and the Taiwan Region, hereinafter referred to as the Special Administrative Region) have not yet begun.

On the same date, the SEC said the two companies announced a strategic development and commercialization collaboration to advance BioNTech's BNT162 mRNA vaccine candidate in China for the prevention of Covid-19 infections.

“BioNTech will retain all rights to develop and commercialize the vaccine in the rest of the world.”

Meanwhile, BioNTech confirmed the terms of the agreement, stating that the two companies would work together on the development of BNT162 in China.

On March 17, an SEC filing indicated that Pfizer Inc. and BioNTech had signed a “letter of intent for the joint development and distribution (outside China) of a potential mRNA-based coronavirus vaccine to prevent Covid-19 infection.”

"This collaboration aims to accelerate the development of BioNTech's first mRNA vaccine program against Covid-19, BNT162 (the same as the Chinese vaccine program), which is expected to enter clinical trials by the end of April 2020."

Pfizer confirmed the collaboration the same day

In May 2021, Fosun stated that "the joint venture will adopt appropriate intellectual property protection mechanisms to protect BioNTech's intellectual property, know-how and trade secrets."

Four months ago, U.S. Senator Ron Johnson held a hearing titled “Corrupting Science and Federal Health Agencies: How Health Officials Downplayed and Concealed Myocarditis and Other Adverse Events Associated with COVID-19 Vaccines.” He released an interim report with more than 2,400 pages of documents detailing the failure of federal health agencies to adequately warn the public about risks, such as myocarditis and associated heart inflammation, following mRNA COVID-19 vaccination. Johnson cited Wolf’s collaboration, among other things.
